About Our Work

Thanks to all of you for making the activities of last Lord's day an uplifting occasion for all of us. We have appreciated your comments about our services, and I think all of us enjoyed the time together for lunch and the special schedule for the afternoon. It was a touching day.

I remember Clay Joseph saying one time that "a building can't love us back." It is the Lord who loves, and we who are his people will have to fill the place with the loving, both of him and of one another. Hopefully, we recognize that. We've read in our Bible readings these last few days of the time Jeremiah stood in the gates of God's house and reminded his people that their everyday ways and their deeds needed to be consistent with their coming to that place (Jer. 7:1-12). We want to take what he is saying to heart, too.

Thanks to Danny Boggs for getting our summer series off to a good start Wednesday night. Jonathan House will be here this week. Don't miss it! All of us can really benefit from this theme, and from the different perspectives these brothers bring to these topics. We also want to encourage them while they are here – and each other as well. Thanks for your interest and help.

This series always brings to my mind a group of servants to whom we are very much indebted – teachers of our children's classes. They keep doing their great work while the rest of us get to sit at the feet of guest teachers. They do it so our kids can have Bible classes, and so parents can give their attention to some special lessons. Thank a teacher – and thanks for bringing your youngsters to class.

Some are away on trips and vacations. Please help us be sure everyone is ok, and that we are not overlooking needs. Please give notice to the special activities that are mentioned inside this newsletter. And, please keep our elders and all of us in your prayers. Our love to all of you.

–Bill McFarland

We appreciated so much all the kindness shown us during our mom's illness and passing. Mom had made friends at Water Mill this past year and especially loved attending the Thursday Ladies Bible Class. For the calls, cards, visits to the hospital and the caring hugs we thank you. A special thank you to those who came to the visitation, the service and to Water Mill for the beautiful flowers. All the expressions of love brought us great comfort.
