Welcome!

Welcome to a beautiful time of the year. It's my favorite. We've already been enjoying the season, but part of the wonder of it to me is knowing that things are changing and a new situation is coming. It always reminds me how dependent I am upon the faithful love of God, and that, as the old song says, that "it over and around us lies."

Welcome to Standard Time. I hope you're not too tired from getting up at 2:00 am to set your clock back, and that you won't be feeling way too hungry before lunch time gets here, and that your body adjusts to how the rhythms of the days are now, and that you experience no season blues from it seeming to get dark so early. Other than all that, enjoy. I can see how you might get the impression that I personally would rather just stay this way.

Welcome to the Lord's day. It's the day we come together in recognition of the one to whom we belong, to remember what he gave to make us his own, to express our identity as people of the Lord, to orient ourselves to a new week and to establish what comes first for us as we live it, and to strengthen and encourage each other in rising to that task. It's a great day, and we're thankful for it.

Welcome to our assembly. As we together offer a spiritual sacrifice through the services that we understand the New Testament invites the church to offer, our goal is to participate with our hearts and minds. Today we're going to be thinking on what the Lord said about how important it is that his servants be able to engage in thankful rejoicing over the right things.

Welcome to the new week. It will bring lots of opportunities to get involved, lots of things to get done, a number of things to pray for, and, no doubt, some burdens to help each other bear. I hope you'll give things your attention, and that you can find a way to help that you'll enjoy.
