Dear Fathers...

If you're a dad, doing your best to be present as a responsible blessing in the lives of your children, you're engaged in holy work. But it's also a task you're trying to fulfill in a setting of considerable societal controversy over every aspect of family life. These days, a father's proper place in the picture can be confusing and distressing.

It might help to consider a couple of things we all know. One is that everyone requires protection, care, provision, training and understanding while turning from a baby into an adult. But these are exactly the kinds of tasks to which fathers are called in the scriptures.

And the other thing is that anyone benefits when these tasks are being addressed by one whose normal way is compassionate, kind, humble, gentle, patient, forgiving, loving, peaceful and grateful. But this is the very character of one who is being transformed into the image of Christ.

It is no great leap of faith to believe that our world becomes a better place as the responsibilities of fathers are being attended by men who are like Christ.

Thank you for being such a man. Happy Father's Day to you, and may God bless you in your holy work.

- Bill McFarland
